CHARLOTTE LEIGH

About the Artist

Up-and-coming vocalist Charlotte Leigh (June 12, 1997 in Little Rock, Ark.) is dedicated to composing and performing the hottest pop music with a country attitude and southern, soulful style. This gift to the music world began performing in local talent shows at the age of 11 and has proven she has mega-star potential. She released her debut single and video "Not Another Love Song" in the fall of 2014. Her first EP, "Take a Chance," has a special, deeply personal meaning to her. "It can be hard to put yourself out there," she says, "but to get to where I am I definitely just had to take a chance." The EP became an instant hit both in the local and larger markets including Atlanta and Los Angeles. In sixth grade, Charlotte performed a duet with country sensation Kelly Pickler. And in 2014, Charlotte performed the National Anthem at the SEC basketball tournament. She co-wrote her smash single "Little Rock" with Christian "Davis" Stalnecker. "It is my anthem," she says, "It's just about how my life has been and my family and my friends. It really means a lot to me." Her musical style is outlined in the song's chorus: "In Little Rock, We mix a little Country with a little Pop." The song she dedicated to her home town will forever remain close to heart but will also propel her to the next level. She performed "Little Rock" on the radio at 103.7 The Buzz, on television at THV 11 and rang in 2015 with the jam on KATV 7. Her deep sultry voice, fresh alluring look, and phenomenal upbeat performances earned her an invitation to play at Riverfest 2015, opening for Sam Hunt, a star quickly climbing the country-pop charts.

Who Charlotte is

Charlotte is a hot young artist on her way to the top; but, at the core she is an always positive, fun-loving family girl who's proud of her faith in God and will never forget her roots. She first began singing in church, and she thanks her parents for pushing her to perform in those early talent shows. Close friends and family always supported her, and she remains ever grateful to them and she becomes increasingly successful. When Charlotte was growing up, she and her family went to as many Arkansas Razorbacks games as they could. This fall, Charlotte will be attending college at the University of Arkansas where she will be able to join her beloved Hogs. Charlotte loves the Little Rock city life, but some of her fondest memories are of spending time with her family on her grandmother's Texas ranch. Her music is a direct reflection of who Charlotte is as a person; in her own words, she's "a city girl who loves to spend time on the ranch!" Charlotte is influenced by many people in the music industry, but her mother is her true hero. "My mom always pushed me to be my best and to be myself," she says.

Music and Philosophy

Charlotte is currently working with her producer Christian "Davis" Stalnecker, who received an R&B Album of the Year Grammy nomination. Together they wrote the single "Kill ur TV" and the smash "Little Rock." Davis, who has worked with New Kids on the Block and toured with Christina Aguilera, said that "Charlotte has all the right stuff to make it; the drive, the attitude, the talent; she's a great singer and fun to be around. She puts off that vibe: she was made to be in the business." Davis produced Charlotte's first EP, "Take a Chance," and is collaborating with Charlotte to release her first full-length album in late 2015. AZ Productions, a company that has worked with names like Snoop Dogg and Lil Wayne, produced the music video, "Not Another Love Song," and continues to rack up the views on Youtube and on Charlotte's website, www.charlotteleigh.com. Charlotte said she grew up listening to classic rock artists such as The Rolling Stones and AC/DC, classic country artists such as Johnny Cash and loves contemporary mainstream dance and pop like Usher and Miley Cyrus. Her Pop with a hint of Country style has been compared to Taylor Swift, another artist Charlotte admires.
